

Dragonfly Dreams... all things wedding & magic

Introduction

Dragonfly Dreams will be a one-stop site for all wedding needs. A full service resource hub can be of tremendous help to a family planning a wedding of any size. I intend for this to be a sort of virtual wedding coordinator, with links, photos, and recommendations for everything a bridal party would need for the big day, or big weekend, and the weeks leading up to it! Brides are able to search for ideas and tips on themes, cakes, venues, destination weddings, out-of-town-guests, and so much more.

They are also able to choose what stage of planning they are already in and decide how much help they need. Whether they are just beginning their journey; have what they want but want someone to coordinate the details; or just need someone the day of, to make sure everything is in place for their special day, we can help!

Planning a wedding, while exciting, is hectic, nerve-wrecking, overwhelming, and (oftentimes) expensive. Large or small, there are a million details to tend to, and a million more no one thinks of but wish they had. I intend to make that process easier and less stressful.

Design & Implementation

We initially started designing a landing page and a second (main) page. While sketching out both, we made notes as to what code to use; if we wanted to link a style sheet or have everything on one document, etc.

We made a lot of changes during the process. I wanted a lot of animation for the landing page, but it was becoming a much larger project than we had the time, or the know-how, to accomplish. We had to pare down a bit and approach this project in a more reasonable fashion. Basically, we stuck with what we've been learning the last four weeks, but still tried to be creative.

Conclusions

What did we learn? We learned that the way to get the hang of this is to just do it. Joe has a way better grasp on this than I do, but I'm slowly and surely getting there. As far as shortcomings, it was difficult to have a vision, and not be able to accomplish it. We were able to see how we work together, since we will be running a business together.